

M'CARREN PUT OUT AFTER LONG FIGHT

Convention Sustains Com mittee's Report After Two Days' Bitter Contest.

NO MENTION OF BRYAN IN PLATFORM ADOPTED

NEW YORK, April 15.—State Senator Patrick H. McCarron, leader of the Kings county Democracy, was unseated last night as a delegate to the party's State convention in Carnegie Hall, to select representatives to the Denver national convention, after a two-days' bitter contest before the committee on credentials. He was alternately greeted with shouts of "traitor" and "scoundrel" by the delegates to the convention, and once was insulted by a man on the platform near him. The Senator instantly told this man that he would talk to him outside.

Amid scenes tense and dramatic in the first appeal to the voters, McCarron first appealed to the county committee for the majority reconof the committee, and followed them up with deliberate defiance of those who, he said, were excluding him from the place to which he had been chosen by his constituents.

He threatened Tammany delegates with the statement that if they plans to put him outside the party line, he would be carried out, no one in the convention would live long enough to stop the election of another Democrat.

The Tide Against Him.

From the time he entered the hall McCarran proceeded to the chairs of his friends, and the majority were against him, and the counter demonstrations were greater in volume.

The proceedings were attended with much confusion and disorder, in which the speakers were not only drowned out, but they were both parties participated. The business for which the convention had assembled was the selection of delegates, nomination of presidential electors and the adoption of a platform, was almost forgotten in the settlement over the McCarran contest.

When the vote was announced McCarren with his followers rose and left the hall. Blvd S. Coler, of Kings, and his fellow-delegates at once intervened and refused to leave McCarran's side. Coler and McCarran said that he would carry his fight to the Denver convention.

After the settlement of the McCarran and other contests, the convention proceeded with its task and named delegates and electors and adopted a platform.

The friends of W. J. Bryan then decided to abandon the idea of a general report to the convention from the committee of resolutions, favoring an instructed delegation for Mr. Bryan, and the committee of the Nebraska men no fight on the floor of the convention.

No Mention of Bryan.

The platform reads as follows:

The Democracy of the State of New York, in convention assembled, hereby declares as follows: We believe that the Democracy of the nation, by the adoption of its platform, in questions of great public importance and by the blunders and extravagance of the Republican party, has this year presented it an unusual opportunity to reassert its control of the government of the country, and to that end we believe that every sacrifice which patriotism may suggest or public sentiment require should be made by all men, and the principles of the party again put Democratic principles into actual operation in the administration of the affairs of the government.

We believe that as the country is greater than any party, so the party is greater than any of its members, and therefore personal ambition and individual preferment must give way to the good of the many and the triumph of the cause.

We hold that the party are the people, and up as they are with much that is greatest in the history of the country, require that national conventions should be gatherings of the best intellect, the ripest judgment, and the most patriotic spirit in the party.

And, therefore, we, representing the people in this great State of the Union, a State whose electoral vote is essential to Democratic victory with no animosity or hostility for any candidate, and animated only by devotion to the principles of the party, will, at the same time, urge the country to send to Denver in July next, unpledged, unfettered and uninstructed, their ablest, strongest and most representative men to the end that out of their self-selected number a selection of such men, there may be then and there nominated a ticket which will rally to its support the judgment, conscience and vote of

A resolution that the delegates selected to go to the national convention at Denver be instructed to adopt the unit rule was adopted.

Scene of Wild Disorder.—After the platform had been adopted and the delegates named a scene of wild disorder followed. The names of the delegates to the names of the national State committee.

Delegates from several districts protested that the names read were not those selected. The chairman replied
